This review is for Adobe Photoshop CC on the desktop. I am using the full version of Photoshop, not CC. The version I am using is MAC version.

I have covered the 1st half of my productivity with Adobe Photoshop, and continue with the 2nd half.

PERFORMANCE

Adobe Photoshop CC is phenomenal. I live in the developer version of Lr and the performance with openslide is amazing. I am in love with my iPad Pro with the Apple Pencil. The iPad Pro in my lap, I can edit a photo, add music and transitions just as I would on my desktop, but on a small screen. (My 8- and 10-inch iPads are old square tablets with no rounded edges, sorry!) I am not using the eraser tool much, but I do use the brushes to create some special effects on my ability.

The Android app works great, but the iPhone does not! The camera app is great, but not good for my purposes. The creative sorts on the phone like to use filters, and those are not available on the iPhone. I have Adobe Photoshop mobile on my phone, but it's a limited effect. I have the DNGs in Lr5. Could not get the smart preview options 1st to work. Decided to enable all of them, and haven't seen a hard of a difference. But, I do like the smart preview. As far as I can tell, there is no way to import a RAW file from the Fujifilm X-Trans 2 on to the iPad Pro. Anyone have an answer? I could not find a RAW converter provided by Fuji.

I did find, if you load a Raw on to the PC, they convert to JPEG. However, the conversion is very low quality.

Adobe Sensei technology makes this possible by learning the object’s composition characteristics and how it visually fits in the overall picture. With the click of a button, a single action removes and replaces the foreground object. You can also go full algorithmic and replace the entire picture with another image.
